.. The archers are all. It's ten years since the infection started. Invisible Strain. The original survivor's story is here. Player Information. Its the year 2027. A black market for drugs has opened up as the illness that was supposed to kill us all 10 years ago spreads into other strains. You are the newly recruited Cadet in the Cadre of the Infected for the Department of Infectious Diseases (DID). You are trained to. I'm an admin for a 4 player game in which all 4 players are infected and have a character in which they've been infected at least two months. The game has been live since July of this year, and has 5 months left. I'm looking for advice on how to proceed with the game. My Experience with the game: As I've mentioned in an earlier post, I was one of the four people who started this game. The game is on in a private community in a private room on Discord. We've had a few small issues since we started playing, most of which have been resolved by the players. All in all, everyone seems to be having fun. The GM: Our GM is AM, who has been running the game for over a year. I've played with her a few times, and she's very easy to work with. She posts the story and updates to the game by Tuesday, and posts the updates on Saturday. The Players: We all play from separate areas of the U.S.. Our characters are mostly isolated. All of them had been infected for two months before we started the game. All but one of us are White. The GM is Black and the player she is currently playing with is also White. I don't want to post the names of the other three because I don't want to reveal anything about them. They are all pretty awesome players who I've gotten to know over the past couple of months. They aren't friends, but they are very friendly and easy to work with. The GM has been great about letting them know when she needs help. The Infection: To give a little more background for this part, the infection has been going on for ten years. The original outbreak was in 2007, but there was a second wave that occurred in 2014. The three characters that I play with started as I started playing the game. What's going on in the 82157476af
